

M.S. IN GLOBAL MEDIA AND CULTURES RUSSIAN CONCENTRATION

The 12-month M.S. in Global Media and Cultures offers targeted bilingual preparation for careers in media, international business, and global leadership. Our program provides experiential training in media studies, cross-cultural communication, and advanced competence in a high-impact language and region. Students build a bilingual portfolio through internships, media production, research, and leadership opportunities.

Russian Program

The Russian program offers rigorous content-based study of the matrices and fault lines that define Russian, Soviet, and post-Soviet culture. Faculty strengths lie in the study of historical and cultural memory and its manipulations, systems of artistic meaning and their history, Russian poetry, fiction, and song, and intersections of literature and the sciences. Achieve a high level of real-world linguistic competence, acquire deep knowledge of "what makes Russian culture tick," and work with our faculty to design your own path of inquiry.
